Ex-F.B.I. Agent Tells of Relationship With Emigré

By JUDITH CUMMINGS

Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, May 1 — A former agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation testified Wednesday that he regarded Svetlana Ogorodnikov, a Russian émigré who is accused of being a Soviet spy, as "psychologically hooked" on him at a time when he was assigned to get information from her.

But the agent, John E. Hunt, said he did not think she was in love with him, as Mrs. Ogorodnikov has asserted.

Mr. Hunt, a former agent in the counterintelligence unit of the Los Angeles division of the bureau, is a Government witness in the trial of Mrs. Ogorodnikov and her husband, Nikolay, who are accused of conspiracy to commit espionage with another former F.B.I. agent, Richard W. Miller. Mr. Miller is to be tried later.

Wednesday was Mr. Hunt's second day under cross examination by Mrs. Ogorodnikov's lawyers.

According to the Government, the Ogorodnikovs and Mr. Miller worked together in a scheme to pass classified information to the Soviet intelligence service, the K.G.B., in exchange for payment to Mr. Miller.

Mrs. Ogorodnikov has maintained in her defense that she was an informer for the F.B.I. on the activities of the Russian émigré community in Los Angeles even before she met Mr. Miller. She says that in that role she had an intimate affair with Mr. Hunt when he was the agent assigned to her case.

The Government denies this assertion and has added that Mrs. Ogorodnikov said at one time that she had an affair with the former Soviet Premier, Yuri V. Andropov, and at another time that she was Mr. Andropov's daughter.

Gregory Stone, one of Mrs. Ogorodnikov's lawyers, asked Mr. Hunt about a series of meetings he had with Mrs.

Ogorodnikov in 1982.

Mr. Hunt told the jury Wednesday that Mrs. Ogorodnikov made what he believed were sexual overtures to him on two occasions. He said he turned down both offers. He said he had also taken her dancing and that he sometimes had to thwart attempts by her to hug him. He also said that she had given him gifts, the only one of which that has been identified so far is a Russian doll. Mr. Hunt said he still has the doll.

The former agent testified that he had not disclosed any of these events in his reports to the F.B.I. about Mrs. Ogorodnikov.

"You know that sexual inducement is often a counterintelligence recruitment technique?" Mr. Stone asked him. "I do," replied Mr. Hunt. Mr. Hunt said under questioning he was also aware that the bureau required agents to report such incidents to their superiors.
